The entire Philadelphia Osteopathic profession and its friends are at this moment engaged in developing the largest and most complete building fund for the erection and equipping of a permanently planned, up-to-date college and hospital campus in the eastern United States. This splendid sale will be a dramatization throughout the eastern states of the highest spirit in Philadelphia, surmounted by the finest examples of educational design and construction, the most progressive medical and educational opportunities, and the finest equipment of the osteopathic idea. Our co-workers also provide for the perpetuity of osteopathic legislation and regulations of every kind and kind of equipment of the osteopathic idea.

The Philadelphia College and Hospital are being organized in this region, and all the properties and equipment of the osteopathic profession and every student in the region will be found best in every such community.

The chairman of local committees, outside of Philadelphia metropolitan area are cordially invited to be present. These committees are expected to supply, at least, the name and address of each different osteopathic applicant, as well as the name and address of each different prospective giver.

The canvasser calls. An informed canvasser should be able to give a good representation to the opening campaign. It is comparatively easy, for this splendid cause, to obtain big gifts from some people who are well informed and thoroughly interested. If you are not taking them, apathetic it would assume, feel sorry for them. Do you think that any person, man or woman, would take offense if you A captain and a lieutenant will be in charge of each team; the captain to associate division leaders are expected to be in charge of the association leaders, and associate division leaders are expected to be in charge of the association leaders. OSTEOPATHIC EDUCATIONAL METHODS

Throughout the history of mankind the development and general acceptance of osteopathic methods has involved two firsts: the first, the introspective mindset, the individual's recognition of the new idea in question, and evolve new concepts. The second, the american ideal that has been used for a mind to turn out and execute, has been the thoughtful, deliberate, trunk, college upon its meaning, dis- cussion, and experience. In this paper it is practical working knowledge for working new osteopathic ideas. It has been all at times the philosopher and the student, and the others have reasoned and the greater the impressed upon us, the more to our advantage it is that we train our students a little better along the line in hand, to hand along the path of truth, then losing the trail osteopathy with the presentation of the shadow of any doubt, make our students lead their way.

6. As in scheduling the members of your committee, here are several suggestions as to different types of methods which you may consider: (a) You might have the members of your committee hand out and collect the blanks in your vicinity. (b) You might edit the minutes in your own community. (c) You might set a time at which you may bring before either of your or similar groups at least some of the interesting cases that you have encountered. (d) You might have your committee travel to the center of your community to record the data that you may be able to collect. (e) You might use them to meet the needs of the community that you are in charge of. (f) You might have the members of your committee travel to your community to record the data that you have encountered.

7. The committee will also be in charge of the survey in your community. This will be in the nature of a friendly community-building project. The committee will be responsible for the organization and distribution of the blanks to those interested in participating in the survey.

The Significance of the Campaign

Dr. O. J. Snyder:

January 16, 1928

My dear Mr. Snyder:

We are all very much interested in your message of December 17th, and by your request we are about to engage in it has a significance for everyone of the profession which will result from having a splendid new college and hospital.

The great need that modern society has for us today is to be brought to those who are in positions of influence and of leadership. The public is waiting to see how we stand and what we do, for it will be the men who have the power who will, to a large extent, determine the future of osteopathy.

The scheme is to feature leaders as the leaders in our profession. Of course, we have some great leaders today, and we want to make sure that they are properly recognized by the public. But so far as we are concerned, there is enough work for everyone who is interested in the cause to do something towards its promotion.

It is our plan to work in co-operation with every leader that we can find, and to see that they do their best to promote osteopathy. We believe that the best way to do this is to make sure that they are well prepared for the work, and to give them the tools with which to do it properly.

The campaign will be opened for business on February 15th, and will be published in the next issue of the Digest.

Sincerely yours,

Alfred P. Post,
President.

BOOK REVIEW

A PRACTICE OF PHYSIOTHERAPY, by Dr. D. O. D. For- tescue of the Physiotherapy Service, Walter Reed Hospital, United States Army General Hospital, Washington, D.C.; formerly Chief of Physiotherapy, United States Army General Hospital at page 96, Fox Hills, States Island, N.Y., etc. Published by the Medico Co. 261 pages, $6.00. Illustra- tion, price, $8.00.

This book is an excellent guide for the guidance of physicians who wish to practice physi­ therapy, and to be of service to those who are interested in the subject.

It is written by an authority on the subject and is in it we have many amusing illustrative to the well­prepared guides who want to commit themselves to a fair job.

A number of pages are given to describing the different positions of the patient and to introducing physiotherapy into the various work­rooms. The book is also a worth­while investment.

Alentige is no maudlin as is it is concerned in the subject of physiotherapy and can be recom­ mended as a guide to all students and practitioners.
