As the Spring issue of THE DIGEST went to press, the announcement of the election of Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr. as president of PCOM, succeeding Dr. Frederic H. Barth, and the election of Dr. Barth as chancellor of the College was announced by the Hon. J. Sydney Hoffman, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Since then congratulations and good wishes have poured in from the PCOM family, Alumni and members and friends of the osteopathic profession all over the United States, assuring the president and chancellor of their loyalty and reaffirming their support.

The College's youngest president, Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr. has provided energy, ability and dedication in helping to shape the College's life for the past 24 years. His dynamic leadership assures a future of continuing progress.

THE COVER

The cover design was especially created for the DIGEST'S presidential issue by Donald R. Hulmes, director of the Department of Educational Communications.
The President: A Profile

Thomas Mifflin Rowland, Jr., was elected president of Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine in June, 1974, by vote of the Board of Trustees. As the fourth president of PCOM, he will direct the destiny of an osteopathic medical center that comprises the largest of the nine osteopathic colleges in the United States, the 250-bed Barth Pavilion Hospital and four Health Care Centers, three in urban Philadelphia and one rural center in upstate Pennsylvania.

His achievements at PCOM over the past 24 years have done much to carry him to the chair of the presidency. Since 1950 he has been an active, dynamic member of the administrative team, helping to shape the College’s life and development. He has served as registrar, director of admissions, administrative assistant to the president, vice president for administrative affairs and executive vice president.

Nearly 2,000 men and women have been admitted to membership in the osteopathic profession by Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., who has been counselor and friend to hundreds of students. At the 1973 Commencement exercises, the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon him in recognition of his devotion and service to the College and of the major role he has played in its administration.

In a recent interview for THE DIGEST, President Rowland evaluated aspects of his varied positions,

I suppose that my work with the students has always been the most pleasant part of the job. I have derived a great deal of pleasure out of playing a part in accepting students to our College, in working with them, helping them with their problems and watching their progress. One of the rewarding areas of my life has been the responsibility of admitting young men and women to a profession which deals with healing the sick.

Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., who is the youngest president of PCOM, was born 50 years ago in Philadelphia, the elder of two sons of Gladys and the late T. Mifflin Rowland. The family lived in Oak Lane and North Philadelphia, and Dr. Rowland still attends the Oak Lane Baptist Church and serves as President of its Board of Trustees. From his family came the examples which would later become his ideals—hard work, patriotism, pride in tradition and a sense of public service. These principles have served him well as a man and as an executive and have sparked his involvement in a number of civic, community and public service organizations. With pride in his Welsh ancestry, he served as president of the Welsh Society of Philadelphia for three terms. He believes that,

In order to be a complete human being, an individual has to be conscious of his tradition—the culture that made him. He also has to be aware of the future. It is impossible to be a total being and just be a “now” person. When a nation or a people or a group cease to remember where they came from, eventually they will be in trouble.

Dr. Rowland is a graduate of Northeast High School and holds a bachelor of science degree from Temple University. His college career was interrupted by service in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II. He received his degree in 1948 and undertook graduate work in public administration. His interest in government has always been strong.
I feel strongly about the American system. I became active in politics at the grass roots level. You can't understand the American system until you do become active and serve a community year after year. It was a complete learning experience for me and added greatly to my knowledge of people.

Dr. Rowland has twice served as delegate to the Republican national conventions in 1968 and 1972. About America today he says,

I no longer think, as I did several years ago, that our country is going downhill. I feel rather strongly that the American people are resilient and that everything moves in cycles. I believe that out of problems like Watergate will come some sort of rebirth of the American form of government. Our people are a great people, and I know that there is a great future for our country.

From his first days at the College, Dr. Rowland's life at PCOM was marked by a sincere interest in his job and a strong dedication to the College and the osteopathic profession. In his words,

When I graduated from college, a great many people felt that I should go into industry, preferably sales, but this never particularly interested me. In order to exist in a job, I have to be able to be dedicated to what I am doing. I believe that the osteopathic concept is a good concept—the holistic approach to the individual makes sense.

The young college registrar was accepted with respect and admiration by a Faculty and Staff that appreciated hard work and devotion. Looking back on those days, an alumnus and member of the Faculty recalled,

Tom Rowland, as a young novice, developed tremendous loyalty to a profession and an institution that were facing much adversity. He was and is a most devoted and dedicated man, always placing the institution first and foremost, a tribute to the measure of his devotion.

As he moved upward in the administration of the College, Tom Rowland proved himself conscientious, ethical in responsibilities and tireless in distributing his talents. He developed a new admissions procedure, committed himself not only to the admission but the education of students, became counselor and friend to hundreds of students and worked incredibly long hours.

A member of the Board of Trustees commented on Dr. Rowland's impressive past and present work ethic that encompasses a 12-hour day, often seven days a week,

Tom has a dedication and loyalty to service seldom seen; his ability to work long and impossible hours, to sacrifice his own personal needs and interest to the betterment of the College is commendable.

Sports have always interested Tom Rowland. As director of admissions, he realized the need for student relaxation and the development of athletics. He encouraged athletic participation in PCOM’s teams and served as coach of the basketball team. Also active in independent sports, he organized sandlot teams in the city and held the posts of commissioner of the Delaware Valley Semiprofessional Football Conference and commissioner of the Philadelphia Basketball League.

One alumnus commented on the sports-minded president,

Tom’s not only interested in sports—he’s good at them, too—baseball and basketball. As a matter of fact, he could even challenge Minnesota Fats to pocket billiards.

In 1959, Dr. Rowland added another area to his administrative responsibilities. At the recommendation of Dr. Barth and the Board of Trustees, he was appointed administrative assistant to the president. Along with his duties as registrar and director of admissions, he assumed the responsibility of the administration of the hospitals, then at 48th and Spruce and at 20th and Susquehanna Avenues. When the Barth Pavilion Hospital opened in 1968, it too came under his jurisdiction.

Thomas M. Rowland, Jr. is more than an able administrator, tireless in the pursuit of quality. He is a man of probity—sincere, uncluttered by pretensions, tough-minded yet receptive to all ideas that will advance Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine. He has won the respect of members of the Faculty, Professional Staff and Alumni for his straightforward opinions and willingness to listen. One alumnus puts it this way.

He is a man of personal integrity who has been a principal mover in the professional growth of the College. He initiated changes, identified areas of academic need and was courageous enough to promote or initiate progressive changes to keep pace. His primary concern is to make this College the finest college in the osteopathic profession. To this he has devoted himself exclusively, and he will let nothing interfere with his goals.

Alumni have always responded to Tom Rowland’s interest in them and in their Association. His election to the presidency was greeted with congratulatory messages from all over the United States. In the words of one alumnus,

It is a measure of the man’s humility that he views the office of the presidency as the important thing, not himself as President. He has
He always had an open door and was a good listener. Students felt they had a friend who would not only listen but translate words into action. He always looked at both sides and tried to resolve problems.

Employees of the College and Hospital also know the new president as a fair-minded man with a sympathetic ear—that is, for those who are willing to give 100% effort to their jobs. New employees sometimes consider him brusque and formidable at first but old-timers at PCOM know him as a sensitive and compassionate man with a sincere interest in their problems.

Dr. Rowland follows the illustrious presidencies of Oscar John Snyder 1900-1905, William E. Brandt 1953-1957 and Frederic H. Barth 1957-1974. From 1905 to 1953, the College was governed by the presidents of the Board of Directors and the deans of the College. As a man who has seen nearly a quarter of a century of dramatic change at PCOM, President Rowland views the most significant event as the purchase of the City Avenue property during the presidency of Chancellor Barth. He has known personally many of the leaders who made exceptional contributions to the College.

There were many great men and women in my early days at PCOM. The dominant figures in Eastern osteopathic medicine were right here at our College. I am reluctant to name names because there are too many who played a part. I suppose the quality I have always admired is dedication. I will use Dr. H. Walter Evans as an example because our College building is named for him. Dr. Evans had one goal in mind—the development of our Hospital and College. He spent untold hours in the institution. All of his time and effort, everything in his life resolved around PCOM.

We weren't paying faculty salaries in those days and a great many men and women gave their time on a volunteer basis to hold this institution together. This should never be forgotten.

President Rowland is equally at home in the legislature at Harrisburg, delivering a report on the status of the College, greeting Alumni at seminars or conventions, showing slides of PCOM at an Alumni luncheon, throwing a football with students or singing in a barbershop quartet at an employee dinner. He is a meticulous man in everything—from answering every letter that crosses his desk to his own appearance. He has always placed a personal emphasis on appearance and professional behavior.

In order to be a good physician or a good anything, it is important to have a certain amount of personal discipline. And patients in health care centers and hospitals are not always young people, and they feel more secure and have more confidence in someone who looks disciplined and professional.

Dr. Rowland assumes the presidency at a vital time in the destiny of Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine. The visionaries and builders have provided the strengths of the present and the framework for the future. The challenge is well taken by our new and dynamic president. His goals are established and his program of achievement has been determined.

We have now certain strengths—a new campus, public recognition (much wider recognition of the osteopathic profession than when I came to the College) and a developing interest by osteopathic physicians and basic scientists in pursuing careers at PCOM. To these strengths I add three goals.

If within the coming years we could have a topflight College, become the hub of osteopathic care in this area and thereby improve and upgrade the image of osteopathic medicine in a dominant allopathic center, I would feel that my administration was successful.
PCOM's First Chancellor

The Board of Trustees recently conferred upon Dr. Frederic H. Barth a historic title—that of first chancellor of Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine—thus honoring a man whose achievements on behalf of the College are legion.

Dr. Barth has been responsible for the shaping and building of PCOM during its third quarter century, first as member of the Board of Directors of the Hospital in 1948, as member and later chairman of the Board of Directors of the College from 1948-1957 and as president of the College from 1957-1974.

His vision and foresight created a long-range program of progress; his organization and administrative ability implemented the expansion of facilities of College, Hospital and Health Care Centers.

Under his leadership the College was rechartered as a Pennsylvania corporation; the Women's Homeopathic Hospital at 20th and Susquehanna Avenue was purchased for inpatient and outpatient services and became a major teaching facility; state aid was achieved for the College's program (the first state support for any osteopathic college), not only benefiting PCOM but serving as a major influence in the granting of aid to osteopathic colleges by other states. This support has increased until currently PCOM receives the same per student grant as do other medical schools in the Commonwealth.

Under his leadership the 16-acre Moss estate at City Avenue and Monument Road was purchased in 1957 as the basis for an osteopathic health care center; the 250-bed F. H. Barth Pavilion Hospital was opened in 1968 and Evans Hall, the seven-level classroom, library and laboratory building, was opened in 1973.

Under his leadership health care outreach programs were inaugurated with a center for the Salvation Army at 8th and Vine in 1959 and continued in the opening of a health care center in Roxborough-Manayunk in 1973. Dr. Barth arranged for the purchase of the Mokoma Inn in Laporte, Sullivan County, which was converted in 1970 to the Laporte Medical Center, a primary health care center providing patient care and health outreach programs for the people of Sullivan County and the surrounding area and serving as an educational training center in rural medicine for students of PCOM.
As a member of the United States delegation, Dr. Barth participated in the 27th session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights held in Geneva, Switzerland in 1971.

The 1974 opening of Overmont House, an apartment residence for senior citizens, was the result of Dr. Barth's imaginative program of assuring the close relationship of PCOM's educational and health care programs with all segments of the population.

On the National Archives building in Washington, D.C. is inscribed a line from Shakespeare's The Tempest, "What's past is prologue."

Upon the achievements of Frederic H. Barth will be built the future of PCOM.

Dr. Barth is shown at the 1974 Commencement exercises with Judge J. Sydney Hoffman (left), chairman of the Board of Trustees; Dr. Rowland (right) and the Faculty marshalls (l-r, background) Dr. J. Ernest Leuzinger and Dr. Paul Lloyd.
There were no rain-dampened spirits among members of the Class of 1974 or their families on Sunday, June 2, although gray skies glowered over Philadelphia and umbrellas dotted Broad Street.

The weather may have been rainy (it even forced the class photo to be taken indoors) but the occasion was historic as PCOM’s largest class—149 men and three women—received their D.O. degrees during the year celebrating the 100th Anniversary of the College. Presiding for the first time as executive vice president was Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr.

The red and gold elegance of the Academy of Music provided a fitting setting for the ceremonies. From the opening academic procession to the presentation of candidates and the recitation of the osteopathic oath, the Commencement exercises retained their traditional formality.

Toward the close of the program, however, Dr. Sherwood R. Mercer, vice president of Educational Affairs, departed from the conventional proceedings to offer a special tribute to the families of the graduates. The individual contributions of wives and children, parents and grandparents were praised as each group stood to receive the plaudits of graduates and friends. This unique tribute, which has become a tradition at PCOM, is always remembered as a happy conclusion to the very special day—a day always marked by history, and never more so than in the year of 1974.
HEW Official Addresses Graduates

A significant part of the 1974 Commencement was the conferring of the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon Henry E. Simmons, M.D., M.P.H., of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Dr. Simmons, who is former director of the Bureau of Drugs in the Food and Drug Administration, serves as principal deputy to Dr. Charles C. Edwards, assistant secretary for Health, H.E.W. In January, 1974, Dr. Simmons was named director of the department’s Office of Professional Standards Review Organization.

Dr. Simmons was cited by Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine for representing both the ancient tradition of the private practice of medicine and a governmental agency charged with responsibility for the quality assessment of health care in the United States.

In an inspiring address to the graduates, Dr. Simmons defined the privilege of practicing medicine.

No man or woman has the right to practice the healing arts. For human rights are, or at least should be, accorded equally to all, while the power to decide—and to decide alone—whether one’s fellow man shall live or die is a privilege given to very few. . .

Privilege takes other forms, not so lofty perhaps, but no less real. For instance, the privilege—surely not the right—to command a place of high respect in society. And with it, the opportunity to earn a living that, even in these times of rising prices and sinking dollars, surely represents a princely wage in the eyes of many.

Or the privilege of receiving so costly an education for which the public at large pays at least half the bill, but to which only about one qualified person in four is granted access.

Is it any wonder that many thousands of young men and women are eager and able to put themselves through the four-year ordeal of undergraduate medical education, and after that, like yourselves, are prepared to embark on still more years of training? Clearly not. The rewards are all too real, both the tangible and intangible. And if those who have not experienced the rigors of medical training cannot know how demanding they are, still they can envy those of us who are privileged to be called physician. We have earned their envy. We must also earn their respect and trust. And that is a far harder and far richer prize.

What I think is wanting in the institution of medicine, if not in the majority of members of that institution, is the courage to admit candidly and forthrightly that we do not hold the keys to human health in our hands alone—that there may be, and indeed almost certainly are, overriding health problems that medicine cannot correct—some for want of ability, others for want of will.
The physician must concern himself with who asks for care, and who does not. He must ask what he can do regarding those things outside the traditional realm of medicine that so clearly affect human health.

Human anatomy is proper to the study of medicine. But so too is the anatomy of urban life, and the pathology associated inevitably with it. It would be comfortable, perhaps, to leave such difficult matters to the social scientists. But medicine can no longer enjoy the luxury of such splendid isolation.

You come to this stage in your careers at a time when the medical profession has an unprecedented opportunity to discharge its responsibilities to the American people and to the great and rightfully honored profession to which we have the privilege to belong.

I urge you to take the utmost care in safeguarding that privilege. For privilege is a priceless gift for which society expects a priceless return.

Charles Battalino, D.O., N. Bergen, N. J., adds a kiss to the doctoral hood he bestowed on his daughter Barbara Battalino Castrignano, D.O.

... meanwhile, back on the staircase, members of the Student Wives Auxiliary provide a haven for little people during the ceremonies. Eleanor Henwood, SWA president, is at left.
Alumni Weekend

Alumni gathered from all parts of the country to participate in the Weekend's activities that included seminars on the latest developments in health care, class reunions and the festive dinner dance. On the occasion of the College's 75th Anniversary, there was special cause to celebrate.

Seminars began on Friday, May 31 and continued through Saturday at Evans Hall and the F. H. Barth Pavilion. The program was co-chaired by Drs. Albert F. D'Alonzo '56, professor and vice chairman, Department of Medicine; Galen S. Young '35, professor and vice chairman, Department of Surgery and Charles W. Snyder '33, professor and chairman, Department of EENT. Discussions and demonstrations were designed to provide application of new techniques for the family practice physician.

Dr. Albert D'Alonzo moderated Friday's all-day seminar which was entitled "The Unconscious Patient." Faculty members from the Departments of Anatomy, Pediatrics, Radiology, Neurology and Psychiatry and the Divisions of Neurosurgery, Metabolic Diseases, Cardiology, Hematology and Oncology, Nephrology and Gastroenterology participated in the lectures and panel discussions. Clinical demonstrations of surgery, ophthalmology and otology were conducted on Saturday coordinated by Dr. Galen S. Young, professor and vice chairman of the Department of Surgery and Dr. Charles W. Snyder '33, director of the Department of EENT. The afternoon's closing seminar on osteopathic therapeutics and tech-
Spokesman for the Class of 1924 was J. Ernest Leuzinger, D.O.

Techniques was coordinated by J. Marshall Hoag '34 and included distinguished physicians from the Department of OP&P.

City Avenue's Holiday Inn was the scene of class reunions and the traditional Alumni Dinner Dance on Friday evening. The evening's highlights included the introduction of the new president of the Alumni Association, Dr. Richard S. Koch '38, who spoke of his pride in the osteopathic profession and in PCOM.

Past president Dr. William B. Strong '26 presented certificates of distinguished service to Dr. Frederic H. Barth, chancellor of the College, and to Dr. Charles W. Snyder, Jr. '33, chairman and secretary of the Alumni Association for service to the College and to the Alumni Association. Mrs. Barth, dean of women, accepted the award for her husband.

Recognition of the members of the 50th Anniversary class was greeted by enthusiastic applause from the Alumni. Spokesman for the Class of 1924 was Dr. J. Ernest Leuzinger, professor emeritus, Department of EENT, who spoke fondly of PCOM's past. He reminisced on the growth of the College from its location at 19th and Spring Garden Streets to today's City Avenue health care complex.

"Minnie and I have never left the PCOM family," he said. "We watched the College grow and nursed its growing pains through the years."

Dr. Leuzinger's remarks were especially meaningful to the Alumni during the 75th Anniversary years. The role that he and others played in molding the history of PCOM was remembered and cherished by all those who came to celebrate the diamond jubilee.

Dr. Rowland and Dr. Lois Goorley Wood '24, Pennington, N. J. trade reminiscences at the Alumni Luncheon.

Past and present officers of the Alumni Association review the challenges at the Alumni Luncheon. (L-r) Drs. Charles A. Hemmer '43, Plantation, Fla., treasurer; Robert J. Furey 52, Wildwood Crest, N. The Class of 1924 celebrates their 50th Anniversary at the Alumni Dinner Dance by reminiscing over their yearbook (FOR WHAT THEY SAW, PLEASE TURN THE PAGE). Standing (l-r), Drs. Margaret O'Malley Leuzinger and J. Ernest Leuzinger of Philadelphia. (The Leuzingers were married six years after graduation); seated (l-r) Dr. Elizabeth Maxwell Warnitz, Abington, Pa., Dr. and Mrs. Walter K. Fasnacht, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. (Mrs. Fasnacht was a founder of the AOA Auxiliary and organized the auxiliaries in Pa. and N. J.) Dr. Lilla Lancey of Phila. was not present at the Dinner Dance but attended the Commencement Dinner the following evening.
Alumni Board of Directors Meet

The Alumni Association’s Board of Directors met in two sessions on May 31 and June 1 at the Holiday Inn, with Dr. William B. Strong ’26, outgoing president, presiding at the first session and Dr. Richard S. Koch ’38, 1974-75 president, presiding on June 1. The nominating committee, chaired by Dr. J. Marshall Hoag ’34 and William B. Wilson ’32, approved the following nominations:

- Dr. Richard S. Koch ’38, president
- Dr. Alfred A. Grilli ’48, president-elect
- Dr. J. Marshall Hoag ’34, vice president
- Dr. Robert J. Furey ’52, secretary
- Dr. Charles A. Hemmer ’34, treasurer

The 75th Anniversary history was completed and over 700 copies sold to Alumni and friends of the College. A few books are still available for those interested. Dr. Michael Sutula ’59, chairman of the membership committee, reported that 1580 alumni paid dues in 1973, an increase of 100. The first edition of an Alumni Directory, proposed by the membership committee, has been published and distributed. The booklet was edited by Paul Gebert, executive secretary, and features a handsome cover design by Donald Hulmes, director of Educational Communications.

(Alumni who have not received the directory are requested to submit their correct addresses to the Alumni Office.)

At the second session, the nominating committee announced the following elections to the Board of Directors:

- Pennsylvania District—Dr. George B. Stineman ’32 to replace Dr. Alfred A. Grilli ’48
- New England District—Dr. Stuart A. Brodsky ’63 to replace Dr. Bruce A. Bochman ’56
- New York District—Dr. Donald I. Phillips ’43 to replace Dr. E. DeVer Tucker ’27

Middle West District—Dr. John Burns ’52 to replace Dr. Otterbein Dressler’s unexpired term.

The 1975 Alumni Weekend is scheduled for May 30 and 31 at the Marriott Motor Inn. Dr. Alfred A. Grilli ’48 is chairman.

Alumni who died between June 1, 1973 and June 1, 1974 were remembered in a brief memorial service on the evening of the Dinner Dance:

The Commencement Dinner
A Night to Remember

It was a night to recognize achievement in all branches of the PCOM family with a special spotlight on the graduates and the 50th anniversary class.

Congratulations and good wishes for the Class of 1974 were heard in every corner of the Bellevue Stratford’s ballroom. Telegrams brought messages of good will from Dr. Edward P. Crowell, executive director of the AOA, welcoming the class into membership and from Dr. Earl R. Trievel '68, who chaired the Department of Anatomy during the graduates’ first year. In brief but animated remarks, State Superior Court Judge J. Sydney Hoffman, chairman of the Board of Trustees, reaffirmed his support and affectionate regard for the class who would receive the degree of doctor of osteopathic medicine the next day.

Individual accomplishments were recognized by scholarships to students and awards to outstanding graduates announced by Dean Robert W. England and presented by the new director of admissions, Carol A. Fox. See page 23.) Dean England cited the Faculty for distinguished teaching and contributions to PCOM as he announced the Faculty promotions (see page 22). Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr. also praised the Faculty in his introduction of a group “often unappreciated but owed so much by so many.”

Dr. Rowland himself was greeted by a standing ovation—a tribute to the esteem in which he is held by students and Faculty. In turn Judge Hoffman received a commendation from Dr. Rowland and the Administration for his support and encouragement throughout the year.

The student body also had their moments of commendation in the class awards for individual professors. Introduced by Timothy Young, president of Student Council, the class chairmen presented the awards for outstanding efforts in teaching on behalf of each class:

Dr. G. Frederic Uberti '65, director of Medical Education at Shenango Valley Osteopathic Hospital, received the 1974 Class award for furthering clinical education from James Gerrie.

Dr. John Simelaro, second-year resident in Internal Medicine, representing all interns and residents for teaching at Barth Pavilion, received the 1973 Class award from Rev. John J. O'Brien.

Robert Mancini, Ph.D., assistant professor of Pharmacology, received the 1976 Class award for student didactic education from Michael Gallagher.

James O. Brown, Ph.D., professor of Anatomy, received the 1977 Class award for student didactic education from H. Sprague Taveau.

A special award, presented for the first time, honored Dr. Robert Jama, chief resident, for his leadership and dedication. In recognizing Bob Jama, Dr. Rowland said, "It is rare when one accepts a position of leadership, knowing in advance that there is no special reward from those he must lead. He understood what had to be done; he did it; and we appreciate it." (Dr. Jama, who completed a four-year surgical residency at Barth Pavilion, has been granted a fellowship to study shock and trauma at Hahnemann Medical College.)

Sharing honors with the graduating class was the 50th Anniversary Class of 1974, represented by Drs. J. Ernest and Margaret Leuzinger and Dr. Lilla Lancy. Another anniversary was celebrated by Dr. Paul T. Lloyd, professor emeritus of Radiology, who marked the 50th consecutive year of Faculty membership as one of PCOM's great teachers.

The night to remember concluded with Dr. and Mrs. Sherwood R. Mercer's presentation of silver wishbone pins to 100 student wives and one student husband. The pins are a personal gift of the Mercers' to symbolize their wishes for the material and spiritual goals of the graduates.

Dr. Harold Salkind, assistant to the president and member of PCOM’s Board of Trustees, was selected one of the international ambassadors of Variety Club International by President Mike Frankovich, the well-known movie producer. Dr. Salkind has been associated with Variety Clubs for many years and will continue to aid handicapped children all over the world in his new post.

Ivan (Cy) Peterman, former editor of THE DIGEST and author of the Alumni Association’s history of PCOM, revisited Holland with 15 former war correspondents and military VIP’s as the guests of the Dutch government. The occasion was the 30th anniversary of “Operation Market Garden,” the code for the Allied airborne invasion of Holland during World War II. Cy, who was wounded twice and decorated three times during the War, translated his recent experience into an article for the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Dr. and Mrs. David Heilig, professor, OP & P), celebrated their wedding anniversary at the Commencement Dinner. That’s the key to his heart that he’s giving her.

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Baldwin were honored at a dinner by the professional staff on the occasion of Dr. Baldwin’s retirement as chairman of the Department of Internal Medicine. Dr. Baldwin, who graduated in 1934, has been associated with PCOM for nearly 40 years. Mrs. Baldwin is a graduate of PCOM’s School of Nursing and was a member of the Women’s Guild for 38 years.

Dr. Sherwood R. Mercer (left) and Mrs. Mercer (far right) presented their traditional wishbone pins to student wives and, for the first time, to a student husband, Dominic Castrignano (second from left). Student wives included Linda Kendrick (center) and Andrea Gerrie (second from right).

Film makers Friedman and Vinn

Men Who Made the Movie

"It's In Your Hands" is the name of a public service presentation film on nutrition that evolved from the summer project of two first-year students. Andrew Friedman '77 and Norman Vinn '77 conceived, produced, researched, wrote, directed and edited the documentary which will be made available to consumer groups, community organizations, educational institutions and state public health departments. The film was produced under the auspices of PCOM's Department of Educational Communications.

"Andy and I hope for maximum utilization of the film," said Vinn, whose father, J. Edgar, is a 1940 alumnus. "And we look forward to its being the first in a series of public service films for the College.

"We are grateful to many people and organizations who helped with the production. The Pennsylvania Department of Health provided consultation on nutrition; the Germantown Theater Guild guided us to actors; Pickwell Fine Foods and the University of Pennsylvania Arboretum loaned us locations and the Administration of the College gave us the opportunity and their utmost patience," said the men who made the movie.

Both film makers had previous production experience in undergraduate school. Friedman holds a B.S. in Radio-TV from Temple School of Communications. Vinn holds a B.A. in English from Tulane University and had professional film experience in addition to producing a film on nutrition in cooperation with the Louisiana Department of Health.
GONE APE? No, just a student stunt to relax tensions during June exams. Yes, everyone passed.

Officers of the Student Wives Auxiliary for 1974-75 are (l-r), Elaine Powell, corresponding secretary; Barbara Littlefield, first vice president; Eleanor Henwood, president; Carolyn Pope, recording secretary and Barbara Lincow, second vice president.

John A. Balazs, D.O., Sicklerville, N. J., performs a temporal bone procedure under the guidance of Ronald A. Kirschner, D.O. during a recent temporal bone surgery course conducted at PCOM by the Neurosensory Unit. The course, the first of its kind conducted at the College, was limited to eight resident physicians and was televised to residents and students. Dr. Balazs is a resident at the U.S. Naval Hospital, Phila. and Dr. Kirschner is associate professor of ophthalmology, otorhinolaryngology and broncocepahology.
Members of the national honorary osteopathic fraternity, Sigma Sigma Phi, and administrative and alumni officials, who are members, pose after induction ceremonies on June 1.

NEW OFFICERS OF POMA . . . Officers of Pennsylvania Osteopathic Medical Association were installed at the recent Eastern Regional Osteopathic Convention. (L-r) Drs. A. Archie Feinstein '42, secretary-treasurer for the 12th consecutive year, assistant dean for clinical training at PCOM; Raymond J. Saloom '60, immediate past president, Harrisville, Pa.; Vernon C. Buckley, president, Philadelphia; Harold F. White '61, president-elect, Lancaster and Hymen Kanoff '52, vice president, Phila.
F. H. Barth Pavilion has added two new surgical rooms—one for minor surgical procedures and one for cystoscopic surgery. The cystoscopic room is equipped with a hydrojust urologic table with daylight fluoroscope and television monitoring hookup. An overhead x-ray unit allows studies to be made directly without transferring the patient to the Radiology Department. The latest in fiberoptic endoscopic equipment is also available, including a photographic light source for endoscopic photography.

The Radiology Department's latest equipment has added ultra sound to the diagnostic breast screening program which includes a temperature control room for thermography and a mammorex x-ray machine. Dupont Vacu-Pak films allow for great reduction in the amount of radiation to the breast. Also new is the polytomographic unit which can be used for such high definition studies as middle ear and mastoid examination.

Dr. Richard M. Purse, who completed his first year of residency in Radiology, has been awarded a Mead Johnson research grant by the National Osteopathic Foundation for the study of the effects of radiation therapy on prostatic carcinoma.

The Roxborough-Manayunk Health Care Center under the direction of Dr. Ronald Woodworth announces the increase of patient visits to 100 a week with five to six new patients each day. The cancer screening program has been implemented utilizing Pap tests and proctosigmoidoscopy. Diabetic and pre-natal teaching classes are planned.

Robert Jama, D.O., chief resident, is congratulated by Robert Erwin, D.O., F.A.C.O.S., chairman of the Department of Surgery at Barth Pavilion, for having completed a four-year residency in surgery.

Dr. Sherwood R. Mercer, vice president, Educational Affairs, was elected president of the American Association of Colleges of Osteopathic Medicine (AACOM) at the association’s annual session in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Spencer G. Bradford, assistant dean for basic sciences, participated in the Colloquium on Drug Equivalency in Washington, D.C. on June 14. Remarks were published by Excerpta Medica Foundation with abstracts to various federal and state agencies. Dr. Bradford also authored an article titled “Osteopathic Medicine,” which appeared in Essays in Medicine, a publication of Medcom.

Dr. A. Archie Feinstein, assistant dean for clinical affairs, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Osteopathic Medical Association.

Dr. Marvin P. Backal, instructor in Pediatrics and associate staff member at Children’s Hospital, Phila., was elected president of the Camden County Society of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons. Dr. Backal is also chairman of the pediatrics department at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital, Stratford, N. J. He is a member of the state osteopathic association’s House of Delegates and the American College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons.

Dr. Ronald Kirschner, associate professor, EENT, recently published (with Dr. Richard Wilner, fourth-year resident) an article in the October Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Monthly. The article is entitled “Rhinophyma-Cold Knife Paring and Contour Dermabrasion —A New Surgical Procedure.”

Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., president, has been appointed chairman of the newly established Council on Educational Development of the American Osteopathic Association. Dr. Paul E. Wilson, AOA president, and Dr. John C. Taylor, past president, will serve as members of the committee.

Dr. Rowland addressed PCOM Alumni at a September luncheon as part of the Third New England Osteopathic Assembly program. The assembly, held in Weirs, New Hampshire, was a joint meeting of the Connecticut Society of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, the Massachusetts Osteopathic Society, the New England Academy of Osteopathy, the New Hampshire Osteopathic Association, and the Rhode Island Society of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons. Members of the Alumni Board present included Dr. Harrison Aldrich, who was largely responsible for the program; Dr. Stuart Brodsky; and Dr. John Lally, who was a panelist. Also present was Dr. Foster True, a member of the College Board of Trustees.

In June Dr. Rowland spoke at the Alumni luncheon of the Ohio Osteopathic Convention in Columbus, Ohio. The meeting was chaired by Dr. Bob Bentz, president of the Ohio Alumni group. The association’s new president is Dr. Alexander Zacous ’47; the president-elect is Dr. Sidney Corbin ’59.

The Third Annual Regional Osteopathic Conference for New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania was held in May in Pittsburgh. Representing PCOM were Dr. Rowland, Dr. Robert W. England, Dr. Spencer Bradford and Mr. John DeAngelis.

Dr. John F. Fleitz, associate professor of proctology, has been elected a Fellow of the American Osteopathic College of Proctology.

Dr. J. Ernest Leuzinger, professor emeritus of otorhinolaryngology and bronchoesophagology, has been awarded a Certificate of Appreciation by action of the Board of Trustees of the American Osteopathic Association in recognition of fifty years of practice.

Dr. Robert C. Erwin, chairman and professor of surgery, discussed the evaluation of the geriatric surgical patient at the 1974 clinical assembly of the American College of Osteopathic Surgeons in Bal Harbour, Fla.

Dr. Henry A. D’Alonzo, assistant professor of surgery, moderated a session of the thoracic-cardiovascular section of the American College of Osteopathic Surgeons at the annual clinical assembly of the ACOS in Bal Harbour, Fla. in October.

IN MEMORIAM

Dr. Arthur G. Jewell '31, Brooks, Maine, died in April at the age of 68. Dr. Jewell maintained a family practice in Brooks, was on the staffs of the Waldo County General Hospital and the Taylor Osteopathic Hospital in Bangor, and conducted health clinics at local schools.

The response of the community to Dr. Jewell's death was enormous. The following testimonials are excerpted from a feature story entitled "The Day They Said Good-Bye to 'Doc,' " which appeared in one of the local papers.

When the Jewells came to Brooks, Hazel Loom and Phyllis Ellis were running a restaurant in town. "Doc and Emily came in to eat occasionally," Hazel said. "He was always my family doctor. He delivered my granddaughter right in that room there." Like all the people I (the author) talked with, Hazel said Doc "seemed like family. He was a country doctor, that's what you could say, the kind you don't find anymore."

His son, John, tells of the time when twins were about to be born and a hot fire was needed fast to boil water. When Doc got ready to leave early the next morning the father told him to be careful. "He had burned the steps for the fire," John said.

Other times he jacked up his car to shine the light into a home delivery room and used an oven to keep an infant warm. He once removed a patient's tonsils on his kitchen table.

For 40 years he has administered to the needs of body and soul of four generations of Brooks area families. He delivered their babies, nursed their wounds, eased their illnesses and cared, in ways deeper than just a doctor's, for their well-being. As Arthur Jewell, and as one of that vanishing species, the country doctor, he will be missed.

Dr. Leon Adam Kowalski '36, Phila., Pa., died on June 25 at Barth Pavilion Hospital. He was 61.

Dr. Kowalski served as chairman of the College's Department of Rehabilitation Medicine and as attending staff physician at Barth Pavilion. He was a practicing physician in the Roxborough area of Philadelphia for over 30 years.

He was elected a fellow of the American College of Rehabilitation Medicine, and served the AOA as a member of the advisory board on graduate education and vice president of the Board of Examiners on Rehabilitation Medicine.

Dr. Kowalski's activities in the Pennsylvania Osteopathic Association included president from 1967-68; member of the board of trustees and chairman of the Rehabilitation Committee. He also worked through the association to secure passage of the Child Abuse Act in Pennsylvania. In 1968 he received the annual meritorious award for service from the association.

Dr. J. M. Russo '39—on September 4 in Toms River, N. J. Dr. Russo maintained a practice in Toms River for the last 33 years. In 1947 he founded the Toms River Maternity Home, which he operated until 1961. For the last 13 years he was on the staff of Community Memorial Hospital. He is survived by his wife, the former Rae Gaskill; a son, Dr. James M., Jr.; two daughter, Mrs. Roberta Lampier and Mrs. Vicki Holstine; and 10 grandchildren.

Dr. Charles J. Gruber '15—on August 3 in Philadelphia, Pa. Dr. Gruber began his practice in 1915 and remained active until his retirement in 1970. Survivors include his wife, the former Marion E. Turner, and a son, Charles J. Gruber, Jr.

Dr. Francis X. Belz '53—on September 8 in Philadelphia, Pa. He was 47. Dr. Belz was a staff physician at Barth Pavilion Hospital, Parkview Hospital in Philadelphia and Suburban General Hospital in Norristown. He also maintained a practice in the Olney section of Philadelphia. Surviving are a son, Francis S.; two daughters, Mary Patricia and Joan Frances; and two brothers, William and John.

Dr. Jerrold S. Schwartz '73—on May 26 at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital, Stratford, N.J., where he was an intern. He was 29. Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Schwartz, and a brother Eric.
The above statement of ownership is published in compliance with United States Post Office regulations.
