Non-Discrimination Policy

Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine admits all students of any race, color, national and ethnic origin, sex and religion to all rights, privileges, programs and activities generally accorded or made available to students at the College.

It does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national and ethnic origin, sex or religion in administration of its employment and educational policies, admissions policies, scholarship and loan programs and other College-administered programs.

Discrimination on the basis of sex is prohibited in accordance with the requirements of Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972. All inquiries regarding compliance with Title IX may be directed to PCOM's Title IX Coordinator, Personnel Office, or to the Director of the Office of Civil Rights, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D.C.
Graduation each year bears witness to the completion of yet another cycle in the life of PCOM. As the traditions of the weekend unfold — rehearsal, the Commencement dinner, the presentation of the wishbones, the graduation ceremony itself — one is reminded of the commencements and graduates of the preceding years.

With the addition of the 214 members of the Class of 1977, PCOM has graduated 5012 osteopathic physicians. Our living alumni number more than 3700 and practice in 43 states as well as in 10 countries around the world.

These are impressive statistics for a school of osteopathic medicine that began in a rented classroom — impressive and thought provoking, as we watch graduates of the country's ninth largest medical school file out of the Academy of Music.

I am sure that all of our alumni join me in saying "Welcome" and congratulations to the Class of 1977.
A most unusual class was graduated from PCOM in Commencement ceremonies on June 5 at Philadelphia's historic Academy of Music. First of all, it was the largest class in the college's 79-year span and will probably hold that record for several years to come. Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., PCOM's president, presented 214 D.O. degrees to 196 men and 18 women.

Also unique was the inclusion in the class of a special group of graduates, "the extended day class" -- 23 members who participated in a pilot program designed to better utilize the facilities of the college. Entering in 1973 with the same requirements as all students, the members of the extended day program attended two years of academic courses from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays and full time hours during the summer. In their third year the students were integrated into the regular two-year clinical education program.

Dr. George J. Luibel, president of the AOA and a Fort Worth general practitioner, delivered the Commencement address to the 86th graduating class. After receiving the honorary degree of doctor by laws from Judge J. Sydney Hoffman, chairman of PCOM's board of trustees, Dr. Luibel welcomed the class of 1977 into "our imperfect world". "We agree", he said, "that you will live in a world of miraculous gadgets, new wonder drugs and new instruments and tests. Nevertheless, . . . what will change least of all will be man himself."

In outlining the accomplishments of the osteopathic school of medicine for the past hundred years, the speaker noted that the profession has successfully cared for man's ailments in a world of constantly changing theories, techniques and modalities. Even today a majority of the general physician's care is supportive, although requiring endless effort and skill." . . . in providing reassurance, relieving pain and alleviating fear, the physician combines philosophy and science to the ultimate degree in the art of practice."

According to Dr. Luibel, too many osteopathic physicians "become so bemused with new tests and techniques that they fail to comprehend and apply fully the osteopathic principles they have learned. So the question is not do we have the knowledge to offer better health care, but do we have the will? I am confident that you share (the) goals . . . of those of us who have preceded you."
He concluded his challenge by saying, “It is going to be your task to maintain for you and your patients the right to practice the discipline you choose, the locality you prefer and to maintain a free choice of doctor-patient relationship. Your past educational exposure has given you the opportunity to develop the intelligence, the strength of character and the moral awareness to meet the challenges that lie ahead.”

The ceremonies included the conferring of three master of science degrees on John M. Ferretti D.O. and Domenic Pisano D.O., internal medicine; and Gerard W. Szczygiel D.O., obstetrics and gynecology.

Dr. Rowland's greeting to the assemblage included a tribute to the graduates' families for their sacrifice and support and congratulations to the graduates on their achievements. "The challenge you face today," he said, "is not setting the world on fire, not revolutionizing the health care delivery system -- but functioning to the best of your ability in whatever setting you find yourself. If you succeed in accomplishing that goal, not only will you find the fulfillment you seek, but our battered and scarred world will be the better for having known you."

...the challenge you face today...(is) functioning to the best of your ability in whatever setting you find yourself.”

Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., B.S., LL.D. (hon)

In what has become a warm tradition at PCOM, the final moments of Commencement were devoted to a tribute to the parents and spouses of the graduates. Departing from the formal academic ceremonies, Dean Robert W. England requested the graduates to express their thanks to those who supported their efforts during the last four years. The class responded with a standing ovation first to their parents and then to their 126 spouses and 108 children.
Leroy Kearney D.O., at 51 is the oldest member of the class of 1977. He is a veteran of WWII and spent 18 years as a teacher in the Detroit public school system before entering PCOM.

Commencement Speaker

George J. Luibel, D.O., who has lectured extensively throughout the United States, is a 1936 graduate of Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine, Kirksville, MO. In addition to maintaining a private practice in Fort Worth, he has held a variety of leadership positions in the osteopathic profession at local, state and national levels. He has served on the AOA board of trustees since 1963 and has represented his state, Texas, for the past 10 years as a member of the AOA'S policymaking body, the house of delegates.

He is a founder of Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine and served as chairman of the board from 1966 to 1975. This year the college awarded him the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters.

Dr. Luibel has also been active on the staff of Fort Worth Osteopathic Hospital for many years, serving as president and chief of staff. He is currently president of the hospital corporation. His offices in many professional associations include past president of the American Academy of Osteopathy, board member and past president of the Texas Osteopathic Medical Association and past president of the Kirksville College Alumni Association.
Dinner Honors Class of 1977

"A family gathering, a salute to the graduating class, a time for reflection", that was how PCOM's president viewed the Commencement dinner. It was also a night to reward the achievements of students and faculty.

Hosted by the board of trustees, the dinner was held on June 3 in the ballroom of the Sheraton Hotel in a relaxed atmosphere of warmth and good fellowship. Sharing the two-tiered dais with dignitaries of PCOM's faculty, board of trustees and administrative staff were the presidents of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Osteopathic Medical Associations, Alexander E. Rodi D.O. '58 and Robinson G. Fry D.O. '56, as well as the president of the Alumni Association, Michael Sutula D.O. '59.

The Honorable J. Sydney Hoffman, Pennsylvania Superior Court judge and chairman of the board of trustees congratulated the class of 1977 in the name of the board and reaffirmed his confidence in the strength of the college and its leaders.

An audience of more than 800 guests recognized the board of trustees, the alumni board, the class of 1977 and the extended day group with prolonged applause. And PCOM's faculty received a standing ovation from the students they had taught for four years.

Student awards, scholarships and Lindback teaching awards were read by Dean England and presented by Carol Fox, director of admissions and student affairs. Award winners appear on page [insert page number]. In addition, Lindback scholarships were presented to William Schiavone '78 and Thomas Tylman '79. The Russell McCaughan scholarship was won by Richard Geary '80 and the Bala Cynwyd-Narberth Rotary Club award was presented by Robert Erwin D.O., professor and chairman of the department of surgery, to Jeff Hugate '77.

Distinguished teachers were honored by each of the four classes: William Walters D.O., professor and chairman of the department of pathology, by the class of 1979; Domenic DeBias, Ph.D., professor and chairman of the department of physiology and pharmacology, by the extended day class.

And for the fifth year in a row, James O. Brown Ph.D., visiting professor of anatomy, was lauded by PCOM students. This time it was the class of 1977 who dedicated its yearbook to a man "who has dramatically and effectively" taught in his own fashion. The dedication was read by Joan Moore (who had also written it) and the yearbook was presented by H. Sprague Taveau IV, chairman of the class.

The evening ended with a commendation from Dr. Rowland and a reminder of responsibility. "I am proud of you," he said, "I expect that each of you will be a good osteopathic physician and know success. "Forces are working, as never before, in an attempt to bring about changes in the delivery of health care. You and the osteopathic physicians in this room have the very serious responsibility of making yourselves heard. If the professionals do not play a significant role the results may very well be chaotic. "... I am proud of each of you. May God bless you all."

Carol Fox, director of admissions and student affairs, presents the deans award to co-winner, Jerry Littlefield.

Nicholas S. Nicholas D.O., professor and chairman of the department of osteopathic principles and practice, presents a Sigma Sigma Phi certificate to Robert Goldberg '77. Twenty-one members of the class of 1977 were elected to the national honorary osteopathic fraternity.
Dr. Sherwood R. Mercer, emeritus professor of history of medicine and osteopathy, presents wishbone pins for good luck to the student spouses, a tradition which he inaugurated nine years ago. At left are Barbara Littlefield and Beth Luckie.

A toast to PCOM is proposed by H. Sprague Taveau IV, chairman of the class of 1977.

The Digest 11
AOA PRESIDENT'S VISIT

George J. Luibel D.O., president of the AOA, visited PCOM on April 15. For more than an hour he spoke to first- and second-year students and answered questions from the floor. Subjects ranged from government intervention, the purpose and function of the AOA, past problems, to continuing medical education, internships and competition from the allopathic profession.

Regarding internships, Dr. Luibel said that the AOA is concerned with both the number and quality of internships. While the profession has a sufficient number of slots through 1980, the AOA is trying to bring additional hospitals into accredited programs for internships and residency training. He also discussed the accomplishments of the AOA's public relations office on a limited budgetary allowance. And he stressed "difference."

"You are different," he told the students. "You have a different modality at your disposal and a different concept involving the musculo-skeletal system. ... you (can) be different doctors and... treat people in a different way."

AWARD TO PCOM

PCOM was honored by Seton Hall University, South Orange, NJ, as "professional school of the year." Dean Robert W. England accepted the award for the college at an April testimonial dinner held in his honor and in honor of the acting dean of the New Jersey School of Osteopathic Medicine, Dr. Richard C. Mason.

ALUMNI OFFICE DEDICATED

Members of the faculty, staff and administration attended brief ceremonies in the Administration Building on June 3, to dedicate the new alumni office. A portrait of Paul Michael Sutula D.O., (left) president of the Alumni Association, welcomes the class of 1977. Accepting the certificates of membership are class chairmen Joan Moore (extended day) and H. Sprague Taveau IV.
Gebert, former executive director of the Alumni Association, was unveiled by his widow as a tribute to the man who worked tirelessly for the alumni during the nine years he was associated with the college. The portrait hangs between the office of the executive director and the secretaries' office on the first floor of what used to be the Moss Mansion.

The office of the current executive director, Dan Santillo, was completely refurnished by the Alumni Association and is more accessible to visiting alumni than its previous location on the third floor. Alumni are cordially invited to stop in whenever they are in Philadelphia.

TWO AWARDS TO STUDENT

Walter Ehrenfeuchter, class of 1978, was the recipient of two awards for outstanding service. This June he received the Sandoz Award for his contributions to the educational objectives of the college and the Ciba Award for community service. The awards are presented annually by the two pharmaceutical companies.

Dan Santillo and Michael Sutula D.O. plan alumni events in the new office of the executive director of alumni affairs.

Our Annual College Growth Fund for campaign year July '76 to June '77 has closed its books. I am delighted to inform you that "The Philadelphia Story" has a successful ending.

A total of $130,063.00 was contributed by alumni, faculty, staff and friends. Yet to come are pledges of $4,870.00. The average gift from all contributors was $125.00 and the percentage of alumni participation was 28.3%. Since the national average of major U.S. colleges is 19%, I consider this participation by our alumni encouraging.

In addition, PCOM received $75,285.49 from the Osteopathic Progress Fund. As you probably know, the OPF is a fund assessment by most state osteopathic associations, that is designated by the contributor to the college of his choice. If not designated, the fund is shared by all the osteopathic colleges. PCOM received 745 donations from this fund with an average gift of $101.00.

There have been some difficulties over the past years with states’ reporting of OPF contributions. If you note any inaccuracies in the following report, please contact Dan Santillo in the alumni office.

I extend my gratitude and the thanks of PCOM to all those who contributed to the success of "The Philadelphia Story". I hope you know that generations of future osteopathic physicians will benefit from your contribution.

Thomas M. Rowland, Jr.
President

The first contribution to the Annual Growth Fund is presented to Dr. Rowland by Mrs. Paul J. Gebert, widow of PCOM’s former executive director of alumni.

New Appointments

Theodore P. Mauer, D.O., of Rose Tree, Media, has been appointed professor and chairman of the department of otorhinolaryngology, bronchoesophagology and oro-facial plastic surgery.

Before joining PCOM's whole-time faculty, Dr. Mauer maintained partnership practice in Havertown, PA. He also served on the attending and consulting staffs of the Hospital of PCOM, Metropolitan Hospital and Haverford Hospital.

A graduate of LaSalle College (1958) and PCOM (1962), Dr. Mauer interned at Riverside Hospital in Wilmington, DE, and completed a three-year residency in otorhinolaryngology and bronchoesophagology at the hospital of PCOM. He received a M.Sc. degree from PCOM.

He is married to the former Suzanne A. Smith of Broomall. The Mauers have three children.

Domenic Pisano D.O. has been appointed chairman of the division of cardiology and assistant professor of internal medicine. He will be responsible for the cardiac, non-invasive laboratory, coronary care unit and the cardiology unit.

Dr. Pisano is a 1972 graduate of PCOM and completed his internship and two years of internal medicine. He has also completed a two-year fellowship in cardiology at the Deborah Heart and Lung Center. At the June commencement, Dr. Pisano was awarded the master of science degree in internal medicine.

He is a member of Sigma Sigma Phi, the national osteopathic honor fraternity and the recipient of the "resident of the year" award in 1975. He has published several papers on cardiac research in the JAOA, Circulation and the American Federation of Clinical Research.

Dr. Pisano is married to the former Dorothy Palmero Ed.D. They have a two-year old son, Domenic Joseph, and reside in Penn Wynne.

Charlotte Greene, Ph.D., assistant professor in the department of physiology and pharmacology, has been awarded a career development investigatorship by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Heart Association. Her research project is titled, "Metabolic Integrity of Isolated Myocardial Cells."

If her study reveals that isolated heart cells behave exactly like those within the intact heart, researchers may be able to devise ways to reduce the number of deaths resulting from spontaneous myocardial infarctions.

Dr. Greene's research is being conducted under the preceptorship of Dr. Domenic A. DeBias, professor and chairman of PCOM's department of physiology and pharmacology. Her investigatorship is one of five recently awarded by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Heart Association, and she is the first PCOM faculty member to receive such an award.

Barbara Nagle, Ph.D., assistant professor in physiology and pharmacology, has received a one-year grant-in-aid from the Fight For Sight Foundation in New York City.

Faculty Notes

Dr. Greene

Charlotte Greene, Ph.D., assistant professor in the department of physiology and pharmacology, has been awarded a career development investigatorship by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Heart Association. Her research project is titled, "Metabolic Integrity of Isolated Myocardial Cells."

If her study reveals that isolated heart cells behave exactly like those within the intact heart, researchers may be able to devise ways to reduce the number of deaths resulting from spontaneous myocardial infarctions.

Dr. Greene's research is being conducted under the preceptorship of Dr. Domenic A. DeBias, professor and chairman of PCOM's department of physiology and pharmacology. Her investigatorship is one of five recently awarded by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Heart Association, and she is the first PCOM faculty member to receive such an award.

Barbara Nagle, Ph.D., assistant professor in physiology and pharmacology, has received a one-year grant-in-aid from the Fight For Sight Foundation in New York City.
Among hundreds of proposed projects, the research grant was one of 30 approved by the Fight For Sight Foundation from among hundreds of proposed projects.

Her project is titled "The Influence of Aqueous Humor Proteins on Drug Bioavailability." The research grant was one of 30 approved by the Fight For Sight Foundation from among hundreds of proposed projects.

Robert W. England D.O., F.A.A.O., F.A.C.G.P., dean, has been appointed to the speakers bureau of the AOA. He has teamed with Arnold Aaron D.O., director of medical education at Zieger-Botsford Hospital, MI, for a panel presentation on postdoctoral training to the students at COMS, Des Moines, IA; and with Harrison Aldrich D.O. '61 for a presentation to students of Ohio University College of Osteopathic Medicine. The Pennsylvania Osteopathic General Practitioners Society awarded the dean an honorary life membership in gratitude for his many years of devoted service to the Society; and Division of Medicine of HEW selected him as consultant for a pilot study on twilight medical schools. The dean and David Heilig D.O., F.A.A.O., professor of osteopathic principles and practice, are among the first six osteopathic physicians to be certified in osteopathic manipulative therapy by the board on fellowship of the American Academy of Osteopathy.

William A. Nickey D.O., assistant professor in internal medicine and chairman of the division of nephrology, presented a program on "Renal Hypertension and its Treatment" at Memorial Osteopathic Hospital in York, PA in May. Dr. Nickey served on the President's task force on hypertension and Governor Shapp's task force on high blood pressure.

Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., B.S., L.L.D. (hon.), president, was honored by the Philadelphia County Osteopathic Society with the first PCOS service award. The award, representing the highest form of recognition of a layman for services to the osteopathic profession, was presented at the first installation and awards dinner of the Society in April. Dr. Rowland was honored by Northeast High School Alumni Association in April with the Association's alumni award; his brother Baron Rowland was cited as Northeast-of-the-Year at the High School's 83rd anniversary banquet. It was the first time two brothers have been honored. Dr. Rowland was elected to membership on the advisory council of the Salvation Army Men's Social Service Center in Roxborough.

Paul T. Lloyd, D.O., F.A.O.C.R., F.A.C.O.S., emeritus professor of radiology, was awarded an honorary life membership in the Philadelphia Division of the American Cancer Society. Dr. Lloyd served the division since 1967, was elected secretary of the board in 1973, a position he held until 1977. The citation read, in part, "Dr. Lloyd, throughout his outstanding career, has battled cancer as a healer, teacher and volunteer."

Leonard Finkelstein D.O., professor of urologic surgery and chairman of the division of urology, published an article in the February Journal of Urology. The paper on vesicoileal fistula was written with the cooperation of David B. Arsh D.O., third year resident in urologic surgery, and Douglas Trenkle '77.

George Guest D.O., F.A.C.N. professor and chairman of the department of neurology and psychiatry, received an award from Lambda Omicron Gamma fraternity at a March meeting in the Poconos. He was cited as "teacher, scholar and educator."

Irvin M. Gerson M.D., consultant to the Neurosensory Center, presented two papers in Montreal in June at the American EEG Association convention. He was recently appointed chairman of the association's committee on computer analysis of EEG. His current article on EKG monitoring during EEG procedures appears in the Clinical EEG Journal, Vol. 8, 1.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the Laporte Medical Center were held in May (yes, that is snow) in Laporte, PA. Part of the dignitaries present are shown above, (l-r) Michael Centrella D.O., director of the center; Michael McFadden, assistant personnel director; Jerry Hickman, administrator of the health care centers; Sullivan County commissioners Maynard Reibson, Donald Worthington and John Hoodak.

LAPORTE MEDICAL CENTER

A new medical center building at Laporte, Sullivan County, PA, will be completed by the end of 1977. Ground-breaking ceremonies were held in May and contractors were on hand to begin work immediately. The center, which is being built with a federal grant of $737,000, will be operated by PCOM.

Also in May a health-screening program for senior citizens was offered in Dushore by the North Penn Home Services Health Agency with the help of the Laporte Medical Center staff. Student-doctors and nurses performed six different tests on over 50 senior citizens. No charge was made for the service.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Mathe of Laporte were honored in April at a retirement dinner. They had served as supervisors of Laporte since its opening in 1970. The Mathes were the former owners of the Makoma Inn, which was sold to PCOM for the center.

ESCALATED CARE OF NEWBORNS

The establishment of a high risk pregnancy clinic by Fairman L. Denlinger, D.O., professor and chairman of the department of ob/gyn, and the purchase of new sophisticated monitoring equipment have escalated the quality of care of newborns at the hospital. The equipment includes fetal monitoring equipment for the evaluation of a baby during labor and a neonatal care center in the nursery, for monitoring, temperature control and care of newborns. During one weekend in June, 11 deliveries were assisted in 48 hours with five newborns under four pounds being cared for in the intensive care nursery.
Alfred A. Meltzer, hospital administrator, congratulates Nobel Marbury, a volunteer in the public relations department, for more than 100 hours of contributed service. Martha Mewbourne, director of the volunteer services department, presided at the reception honoring 72 PCOM volunteers.

VOLUNTEERS HONORED

PCOM's 72 men and women volunteers were honored this June at an awards reception held on the terrace of the Administration Building. Martha Mewbourne, director of volunteer services, expressed the thanks of PCOM to the volunteers; and Alfred A. Meltzer, hospital administrator, presented the awards of gold pins (or necklaces) with the PCOM seal.

The volunteers have contributed both directly and indirectly to patient care through the donation of their services wherever needed, in the offices, service departments, on the nursing floors. The junior volunteers, who donate time during the summer or after school, help as messengers or by filling water pitchers and making unoccupied beds.

Ten adults and 11 junior volunteers received pins for more than 100 hours of service. Dave Wilder, who has worked in many areas of the hospital, including the business office, admissions office, data processing, and print shop, led the group in time served with 1,000 hours. Elaine Gruen, who serves as volunteer patient advocate, received her pin for 500 hours.

NEW RURAL PRECEPTORSHIP IN ORBISONIA, PA

This June, PCOM students began a rotation at Southern Huntingdon Medical Clinic, Orbisonia, PA. The rural town is approximately 50 miles from Millerstown in the Altoona area and has the same medical needs as Greenwood Center. Kenneth Veit D.O. '76 and PCOM students staff the clinic and see nearly 1,000 patients a month.

The Alumni Office is interested in obtaining a college catalog of 1914-1915 in order to complete a collection. If any alumna has such a catalog and would care to donate it to the Office, it will be most appreciated. The Office is also interested in discovering if any catalogs were printed prior to 1912, since there are none before this date in any of the college collections. If you have the answer, please contact Dan Santillo. Many thanks.

National Hospital Week was celebrated by the nation's 7,000 hospitals during the week of May 9 through the 14. At the hospital of PCOM, opening day ceremonies in the lobby featured the unfurling of a red carpet to illustrate the quality of care offered to patients. Judge J. Sydney Hoffman, chairman of the board of trustees, Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr., president, and Alfred A. Meltzer, administrator, expressed the thanks of administration for the important roles played by each employee in the delivery of health care.

Each day during the week, coffee and doughnuts were served to members of the hospital departments as a token of thanks. A continuous slide and sound show was available in the lobby offering a mini-tour of the hospital with emphasis on PCOM's latest services and new equipment. The show was written and filmed by the departments of public relations and educational communications with narration by Walt Webb.

The national theme was "We Put the Care in Health Care," and was adapted by PCOM into badges and bumper stickers proclaiming "At PCOM We Care." Free hypertension screenings were available to the public in the hospital lobby and at 12 locations in the vicinity of the hospital and health care centers. A total of 2,307 screenings were performed during the week, with 36% of those screened referred for hypertension.

Edward L. Chairman, D.P.M., of the hospital professional staff, has been elected president of the Philadelphia County Podiatry Association.
GREENWOOD IS ONE YEAR OLD

Greenwood Medical Center, Millerstown, PA, is a year old this summer and going strong. James L. Witt D.O. '69, director, was surprised by the facility's early popularity. Over 100 patients were treated in the first week. Today, the statistics show more than 200 patients a week are being seen. The center offers 24-hour-a-day service with office hours lasting 10 or 12 hours a day. PCOM third and fourth-year students serve rotations at the center for experience in rural health care. The student-doctors enjoy the one-to-one relationships with patients and the exposure to a wide variety of illnesses. Two of the students are already interested in returning to work in the area after graduation.

Henry D’Alonzo D.O., (right), assistant professor of surgery, presents the “the resident of the year” award from the Survivors Club to Gerard Szczygiel D.O., fourth year resident in ob/gyn. Mrs Szczygiel is at center.

HIGHLIGHTS OF EROC

The Eastern Regional Osteopathic Convention, held May 5-8 at Hershey, PA, drew more than 500 physicians from New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania for three days of continuing medical education, alumni luncheons, banquets, and sports.

The theme of the tri-state convention was "Educational Dimension '77" under the chairmanship of Robert A. Ball D.O. '65. Martin Lasky D.O. '65, served as program chairman.

At PCOM's alumni luncheon on Saturday, the Pennsylvania Osteopathic Medical Association presented Dr. Thomas M. Rowland, Jr. with a distinguished service award. In making the presentation, Hymen Kanoff D.O., outgoing president of POMA, called PCOM's president "a man of strength, fortitude and belief in God," who has set and reached goals "quietly and with humility."

A feature of the luncheon was a slide presentation, by PCOM's president, of the latest developments and new equipment at the college and hospital. The alumni present were impressed with the changes and responded with questions and enthusiastic applause.

Many members of PCOM's faculty participated in the continuing medical education program. Among them were Ralph Tomei D.O. '39, clinical associate professor and chairman of the division of endocrinology and metabolism, who moderated a panel on the diagnosis and treatment of thyroid disease; James C. Giudice D.O. '68, assistant professor of internal medicine and John Simelaro D.O. '71, assistant professor of internal medicine and chairman of the division of respiratory medicine, who discussed the interpretation of arterial blood gases analysis; Alfred DiPiero D.O., clinical assistant professor of internal medicine and chairman of the division of rheumatology, who served on a panel on diagnosis and management of arthritis.

A workshop on osteopathic manipulative therapy was conducted by the chairman and three members of the department of osteopathic principles and practice, Nicholas S. Nicholas D.O., professor and chairman; David Heilig D.O. '44, professor; Marvin Blumberg D.O. '39, assistant professor and Alexander Nicholas D.O. '75, clinical instructor.

Note to sports enthusiasts: Robert Maurer '62 and Robert Renza '62 won the men's doubles tennis tournament.
